

IT Policy

Company Information and Communication Systems Policy:

- The Company provides access to various Information and Communication Systems to authorized employees to assist them in performing their job duties and to conduct its business. Each employee has a responsibility to use the Company's systems in a manner that increases productivity, enhances the Company's public image, and is respectful of other employees. This section summarizes the policies regulating use of the Company's systems, including but not limited to: Telephones; cellular phones; voicemail; email; personal computers and workstations; lap-top computers; mainframe computers; computer networks; personal digital assistants; remote access capabilities; mini computer hardware such as disk drives and tape drives; computer software applications and associated files and data, including software that grants access to external services, such as the Internet; electronic mail, and peripheral equipment such as printers, modems; fax machines; and scanners or copiers. Employees must adhere to all such policies and any policies that each Department may set governing such usage.
- Generally, employees should use the Company's systems only for Company business. Employees, however, may use the Company's systems for limited personal use, so long as such use does not interfere with work duties, the Company's resources, or ability to execute, is not done for an employee's financial gain (or that of any third party), does not conflict with the Company's business, and does not violate any law or Company policy (all as determined by the Company).
- The Company assumes no liability for loss, damage, destruction, alteration, disclosure, or misuse of any personal data or communications transmitted over or stored on the Company's systems. The Company accepts no responsibility or liability for the loss or non-delivery of any personal electronic mail or voicemail communications or any personal data stored on any Company property. Employees have no right of privacy or expectation of privacy with respect to their use of Company systems on premises or remotely. Therefore, the Company strongly discourages employees from storing any personal data on any of the Company's systems, as such data sent, received, or stored in the system that they wish to keep personal as all personal data on the system will be available for search and review by any authorized representatives of the Company.
- Any use of the Company's systems to send, store, view or forward unlawful, offensive, harassing, discriminatory or other inappropriate materials or messages, including pornography, jokes, political or religious materials, and violent or obscene language or images, each as determined by the Company in its discretion, is strictly prohibited.
- Employees must use sound judgment when composing or forwarding e-mails and treat such communications as written, not oral, because they could be retained on the Company's systems even after you have deleted them. In addition, such communications could be retained, copied, and distributed widely by the recipient. Employees must bear in mind that e-mail messages and other communications could be disclosed to unintended recipients, or in court proceedings. Accordingly, employees must be mindful that personal communications possess the prospect for representing or reflecting on the Company. Therefore, care must be taken to ensure that messages are courteous, and professional and business-like (remember to spell check e-mail before sending), and extra addressing care must be taken to ensure that only those persons authorized to receive a message are in fact that e-mail's ultimate recipients.

- To maintain system integrity and to ensure compliance with third-party licensing requirements, all software transmitted over, downloaded onto, or installed on the Company's systems must be approved by the head of Operations. All items uploaded to or downloaded from any location on the Internet, and all electronic mail and attachments thereto, must be scanned for viruses. Materials downloaded from the Internet must be placed on external storage devices, and not on Company-owned computer hard drives, or the Company's network, except as approved by the Head of Operations.

System Security:

The Company has installed a variety of programs and devices to ensure the safety and security of the Company's systems. Employees are not to tamper with or disable any such security devices.

Monitoring of Communications and Files:

- The Company respects the privacy rights of its employees. However, for business reasons, the Company reserves the right at any time, subject to applicable law, to access, monitor, review, copy, delete, and to disclose to any party (inside or outside the Company) all written and electronic communications that employees send or receive at work or using the Company's systems, including e-mail, voicemail, envelopes, or packages. Subject to applicable law, you have no expectation of privacy regarding the use of any of these systems or as to any such materials, and by using such systems you hereby consent to the Company's access to these areas and records.
- Authorized persons may, as permitted by applicable law, access your desk or workspace, paper files, e-mail, voicemail messages, Internet usage record, telephone records, word-processing files and other information files and by using such systems you consent to such access. Certain of the Company's systems can be accessed only by entering a password. Passwords are intended to prevent unauthorized access to information. Passwords do not confer any right of privacy.
- The Company's systems are in general to be used for business related purposes only (except for occasional personal use that does not adversely impact the workplace). All information stored on or transmitted with the Company's systems is treated as business information.
- Employees may not tape any conversation, whether over the telephone or in person, that relates to the Company's business or employees, or otherwise, without the prior approval of the other party(s) to the conversation and of Legal or Human Resources. However, employees should be aware that third parties might record conversations without seeking the employee's permission or giving prior notice.

Confidential Information:

- All data and other information created with, stored on, or transmitted by the Company's systems is subject to the Company's policies regarding confidential and proprietary information, as set forth elsewhere herein. Employees are to maintain their passwords as confidential and should not carelessly leave them visible. Employees must not share passwords and must not access co-worker's systems without express authorization.
- Confidential Information should not be accessed through the Company technology resources in the presence of unauthorized individuals who may view such information. Similarly, laptops and hardcopy containing Confidential Information should not be left unsecured or unattended.

Company Property:

- All Company facilities and property must be kept secure and clean and are to be used for work-related purposes only. The Company reserves the right to inspect all Company property to ensure compliance with the foregoing, without notice to the employee and at any time. The employee's presence at any such inspection shall be at the Company's discretion.
- For security reasons, employees should not leave personal belongings of value in the workplace. The Company shall not have any liability for any such items left on the premises. Personal items are subject to inspection and search, with or without notice and with or without the employee's prior consent.
- Employees who have terminated employment should remove any personal items at the time they leave the Company. Personal items left in the workplace are subject to disposal if not claimed at the time of an employee's departure.

Safe Workplace:

- XYZTech is committed to providing and maintaining a healthy and safe work environment for all employees. Accordingly, XYZTech has instituted an Injury and Illness Prevention Program designed to protect the health and safety of all personnel. Human Resources has the responsibility for administering and implementing our Program.
- The Program may include safety meetings, periodic training sessions, posting safety notices and safety tips and providing periodic written communications to employees regarding safety matters as applicable to our business. Employees may be asked to assist or participate in inspections, the correction of unsafe or unhealthful conditions, or training programs and activities.

- The safety of facilities as well as the welfare of XYZTech's employees depend upon the alertness and sensitivity of every individual to potential safety risks. It is important that employees always follow safe and healthy work practices. Incidents can be prevented only with the cooperation of all employees; as such, the following safety rules should be always observed:
- All employees should be aware of persons loitering for no apparent reason in parking areas, walkways, entrances and exits, and service areas. Immediately notify Human Resources or your Supervisor when unknown persons are acting in a suspicious manner in or around the facilities, or when keys, security passes, or identification badges are missing.
- It is the responsibility of the "host" employee to ensure job candidates, customers and other visitors are always escorted while on Company premises.
- When called away from the work area for an extended period, employees should not leave valuable and/or personal articles in or around their workstations that may be accessible.
- Do not prop open doors when entering or exiting the premises.
- Confirm with Human Resources whether unknown persons have authority to enter XYZTech premises.
- Desks and offices should be secured, and outside doors should be locked at the end of each workday. Employees on XYZTech premises in the evening should lock themselves in while working and lock themselves out when departing.
- Immediately report every work-related injury or potentially hazardous condition, no matter how minor, to Human Resources or your supervisor. First-aid facilities for care of minor injuries are available in the kitchen area and hallway adjacent to the Sales area of XYZTech's corporate office.
- Take every precaution, including exercising wrists and arms, to avoid carpal tunnel and other repetitive motion injuries.
- Learn to lift correctly: do not attempt to push, pull, or lift objects unless it can be done safely. Get help when necessary.
- Participate in the building's emergency evacuation drills.
- As noted above, employees should inform Human Resources or their supervisor immediately about any potential health or safety hazards, and all injuries or accidents, so that any dangerous situation can be corrected. Employees are strongly encouraged to report any situations of this nature – whether such situations occur on Company premises or at a customer site –and need not fear any form of reprisal as the result of their compliance with this policy.

- Compliance with this safety policy is a condition of employment and will be evaluated, together with other aspects of an employee's performance. Safety considerations are important to XYZTech. Employees should not violate safety standards, cause hazardous or dangerous situations, or allow such conditions to remain when they can be effectively remedied.
- XYZTech will make every effort to correct unsafe or unhealthy conditions, work practices, or procedures in a timely manner. Employees should direct any questions they have regarding their obligations under the Injury and Illness Prevention Program or the Company's safety policy to Human Resources.

Telephone and Computer Use Policy:

- The Company understands that when employees work during the week it is occasionally necessary to conduct personal business during office hours. However, employees should limit their personal use of the telephone and computer during office hours. Talk to your manager if you have any questions as to how much is too much time. Because telephone and e-mail systems are provided by the Company at its expense for business use, all messages sent by or received on those systems are Company documents.
- The Company reserves the right to access and to disclose the messages that you send or receive on the voice mail or e-mail systems. Employees should also be aware that "deleted" messages from the computer screen may not actually be deleted from the e-mail system. Employees who abuse this policy are subject to disciplinary procedures up to and including discharge.

Social Media Policy:

- XYZTech recognizes that employees may choose to participate in activities on the Internet, social networking sites, wikis, blogs, personal websites, chat rooms, and other forms of electronic communication ("Social Media"), to exchange ideas they are passionate about and to share their lives and opinions with friends and family.
- The Company encourages employees to participate to help promote Company goals and values, support our customers, improve, or sell our products, and do our jobs better. Historically, XYZTech employees have been excellent at protecting Company information, and have been mindful of security issues and the privacy concerns of their colleagues.
- However, the line between the personal and the professional in Social Media has begun to blur. We feel it important to remind employees that participation in such activities presents certain risks and carries certain responsibilities. As a result, XYZTech has developed this policy to provide guidance for employees using Social Media, whether on Company resources and/or time, or on personal equipment and time, when such use affects the Company.

Personal Responsibility:

- XYZTech expects employees to act responsibly when using Social Media. Such activities must not interfere with the employee's performance of his or her job duties nor should employees use XYZTech resources to access, download, or contribute content to Social Media that contains illegal or inappropriate content including but not limited to sexually oriented materials, or discriminatory, harassing, or defamatory content.
- To the extent employees discuss their employment or identify themselves as XYZTech employees on Social Media, the Company expects employees to use strong judgment and consider the possibility that expressions of opinion may be misinterpreted as authorized statements by the Company.
- We encourage transparency. When using Social Media for company related items, employees should use their real names, and identify, where appropriate, that they work for the Company and are clear about their role in any online dialogue. Simultaneously, unless expressly authorized to speak on behalf of the Company, employees should clarify that their personal opinions are not official statements by XYZTech or the Company's official perspective.
- Also, any postings to Social Media, to the extent they involve or impact one's employment, the workplace, or the Company, are subject to Company workplace policies with respect to prohibited conduct, including, but not limited to, policies prohibiting harassment or discrimination; prohibiting disclosure of Company confidential, proprietary or trade secret information; and governing appropriate use of Company electronic resources. Examples of unacceptable conduct include but are not limited to:
 - i. Posting comments about co-workers, managers or subordinates that may reasonably be viewed as personal, malicious, vulgar, obscene, threatening, intimidating, or harassing.
 - ii. Posting defamatory material about a co-worker (or manager or subordinate), a customer, or a vendor's services, or threats of violence; or
 - iii. Posting XYZTech confidential, proprietary, or trade secret information.
 - iv. Speculating or commenting on the future business performance of XYZTech., including unannounced product launches or strategies.
 - v. Posting tips on inside information to others which may influence them to buy or sell stock or securities.
 - vi. Making derogatory or inflammatory statements about the Company's Competitors.

- vii. Identifying a customer, partner, or vendor by name without prior approval of the Legal Department.
- viii. Using Company email addresses to register on Social Media when utilizing such Media exclusively for personal use.
- ix. Communicating with the media on the Company's behalf without first contacting the Marketing Department for authorization. All media inquiries should be directed to Marketing.
- x. Giving out personal information about customers or other employees. ▪ Nothing in this policy is intended to, and the policy will not be applied in a way that would, restrict or otherwise interfere with an employee's right to engage in legally protected activities such as communicating with co-workers about their employment, compensation or working conditions. It is imperative in Social Media dealings that one be honest and accurate and that one correct mistake quickly. Remember that the Internet archives almost everything, and therefore, even deleted postings can be searched.

Monitoring and Searches; No Privacy:

- The Company reserves the right to monitor the amount of time employees spend on Social Media during work, or to monitor or search any employee's Social Media content created, received, stored, or otherwise remaining on Company resources. The Company strongly encourages employees who wish to access Social Media for non- work-related activities not to use Company resources to do so. Employees should understand that they have no expectation of privacy in any activities conducted on Company resources.

Use of Social Media for Hiring Purposes:

- Employees must exercise caution in searching for and exclusively relying on information from Social Media for work-related purposes, including with respect to hiring or other employment decisions.
- Social Media information may be inaccurate or otherwise unreliable or may reveal an individual's legally protected characteristics (e.g., sexual orientation, religion, or disability) that must not be considered in the hiring or employment decision. The Company encourages employees to seek guidance from Human Resources or Legal should they have any questions in this regard.
- Violation of this Social Media policy, as with other Company workplace policies, may result in discipline up to and including termination of employment.

Solicitation and Distribution of Literature:

To minimize non-business-related disruption, XYZTech does not permit personal solicitations of and/or personal literature distributions to its workforce. All employees are expected to honor this policy. Any employee who may be in doubt about the application of this requirement is urged to consult with Human Resources.
